When a UW-Madison vehicle is used by UW-Madison authorized driver to tow: I understand that the University of Wisconsin provides property insurance for all risks of physical damage for UW property being used in the course and scope of University business and in cooperative agreements with which the University is involved. However, there are deductibles that will be assessed to the responsible department at the time of a loss: $1000 for most losses, and $2500 for theft without sign of forced removal. The Center for Limnology will not pay the deductible for any damage incurred by a user who is not affiliated with a program/project administered by the Center for Limnology.

When a non UW-Madison or personal vehicle is used to tow: If a non UW Madison or personal vehicle is used to pull a University boat & trailer, the University will insure the boat and trailer subject to the deductibles stated above. However, damage to the boat/trailer due to the negligence of the driver and any liability for damage to a third party will be the responsibility of the driver.

Use of UW equipment by non-University of Wisconsin affiliated personnel is contingent on the user's institution/department assuming responsibility for their negligence and liability.
